Sunny Luo

AUG 14, 1955 - JAN 22, 2026

Sunny Luo, 羅新禹, lived a life marked by hard work, resilience, courage, and deep devotion to his family. Born in China to a surgeon father and a pharmacist mother, he spent his early life in many places as his parents' work took them to far-flung corners of the country. In his 20s, he eventually left China to pursue education and opportunity in North America in the 1980s.

Working a series of jobs across Canada and the United States, he learned English, earned an associate's degree, and eventually joined the U.S. Army, where he trained in electronics. Along the way, he met and married his wife, Lucilla, and had two children, Robin and Steven. Upon leaving the military, he settled in California with his family and eventually made his way to United Airlines, where he worked 23 years as an avionics maintenance technician before retiring.

He shared his lifelong passion for travel with his family, wandering Europe while stationed in Germany with the Army and eventually visiting six continents. A man of quiet strength and a surprising number of talents, he was a talented cook, a storyteller with a playful spirit, and someone who was never happier than when he was with small children — those of others as well as his own. Late in life, he battled back from major heart surgery to resume working and traveling the world, and he faced Stage 4 cancer in his final years with the same unwavering determination and will to live.

Sunny is survived by his wife and his two children, who will always miss him deeply and remember him fondly.
